International students

Fees increased by provinces

OTTAWA (CUP)—

Delegates to the conference on Third World Students in Canada here from Nov. 19-21, decided that providing Canadians with information about visa students was a key strategy in countering attacks on them in the form of differential fees and quotas.

The Ontario government's decision to impose differential fees this year "comes from a climate of misinformation" charged Carleton University president Dr. Michael Oliver at the joint conference of World University Services Canada and the Canadian Bureau for International Education (WUSC-CBIE).

As a result the more than 100 delegates recommended that government base decisions affecting international students on adequate information and consultation with students, academic groups and universities.

While it might be hoped that governments follow this advice, indications are that at least one province plans to go ahead despite opposition from its post-secondary institutions.

Alberta announced in May that it plans to impose differential fees on visa students next September. Protests from the three university presidents there seem to have fallen on deaf ears.

Two universities in Manitoba have levied quotas on the number of international students although one, the University of Manitoba, has rejected any restrictions.

What are the facts about visa students?

The Foreign Student File, an ongoing study published by the CBIE in September, provides some preliminary information outlining the number of visa students in Canada, their distribution across the country and in the various faculties as well as a brief section on Canadian students abroad.

About 51,460 student visas were issued in 1976. The figure is based on cumulative data, so a student who registered in January, went home and registered again in September is counted twice.

A total of 23,175 international students were registered in Canadian universities and colleges at the end of 1975 according to the Department of Manpower and Immigration.

Based on that figure, international students made up a little more than 2 percent of the 592,267 students, reported by Statistics Canada, attending Canada's post-secondary institutions that year.

Of the visa students on immigration files, 67 percent went to post-secondary schools, 24,000 to university

Wolfson and Arseneau: CAUT contradictions boggling

By Katherine Gutkind

Verdicts on two McGill cases presently before the Canadian Association of University Teachers (CAUT) seem to have been delayed. The two women academics, Dr. Wolfson of Biology and Claire Arseneau of Social Work, have been officially dismissed by the University and are awaiting final ruling from the CAUT.

The resolution of conflict of interest cases within CAUT review committees has been cited as a possible explanation for the delays. In both situations, McGill representatives were sitting as members of the committees.

The CAUT group responsible for grievances filed by academics, the Academic Freedom and Tenure Committee (AFT), may have been held up by the recent resignation from the McGill cases of David Williams, Associate Executive Secretary of the AFT. Williams teaches at McGill and committee members felt negative about the presence of a McGill representative on the cases. Williams still remains in his position on the AFT. He simply will not be involved with McGill.

In Wolfson's case, Williams put forward two different resolutions. From a letter dated October 7, 1976 from Williams to Wolfson, the AFT decided: "At the next meeting of AFT, we will discuss what settlement, if any, we can press for as you terminate your employment at McGill, but we would urge you to begin now to seek future employment in other institutions..."

On October 19, in a letter to Economics Professor Sid Ingerman, chairperson of the Grievance Committee of the McGill Faculty Union, Williams said "I am writing to inform you of the actions taken or envisaged by the Academic Freedom and Tenure Committee. That we urge the University to provide a substantial financial settlement to Professor Wolfson, beyond the year already granted as a research associate..."

The actions "envisaged" by the AFT are still in the process of "envisagement". According to Wolfson, she received a telephone call from Jim Stevens, chairperson of the AFT, on November 15 when he said that the AFT had proposed a few alternatives for her case. But, the letter to confirm these alternatives has still not arrived from Ottawa.

With Wolfson's case, another possible CAUT discrepancy arises. The CAUT's Status of Women Committee has looked at the Wolfson case and reported its findings to the AFT. Their conclusions were basically negative for Wolfson. One of the members of the committee is McGill's Professor Rose Johnston from Biochemistry, a friend of Gordon MacLachlan, the former Chairperson of Biology who was key in the firing of Wolfson.

Considering it has been deemed unethical for Williams to have resided on the AFT during McGill's cases, why is it still ethical for Johnston to reside on the Status of Women Committee when they consider the Wolfson case? When questioned by the Daily, Johnston replied that the committee was "asked none of the specifics of that (Wolfson) case". Johnston maintains that the committee was asked to evaluate the general problem that: if a woman or a man's case is up for assessment, would the departmental committee involved automatically be discriminatory if a member of the same sex as the candidate involved was left out? Johnston's and the committee's answer was no. She maintains that Wolfson's name was never brought into the question. But, Johnston did admit it was "obvious what person was being talked about".

In a correspondence between Wolfson and Williams, it is clear that the Status of Women Committee had to deal with the Wolfson case specifically: "...the Academic Freedom and Tenure Committee of CAUT discussed your situation at McGill and heard the report of the Committee on the Status of Women on possible sexual bias in the department's handling of your case". (October 7 1976) When Johnston was asked why the letter conflicted with her view, she replied: "I don't know because I have never seen that letter".

Arseneau has been waiting even longer for a reply from the CAUT. "It's not fair to spend five weeks answering a letter", she said. Arseneau is expecting an answer to her proposal that the CAUT immediately set up a board of inquiry. In a letter dated October 19, the AFT stated: "That the Chairperson request Principal Bell to implement the School of Social Work's Promotion and Tenure Committee's ultimate recommendation that Mrs. Arseneau be re-appointed as full-time lecturer with normal rights of future consideration for renewal. Failing this, that CAUT establish a committee of inquiry". Arseneau feels that the negotiations have been unsuccessful up until now, and that the time for this supposed committee is due.

Chevron attackers charged

WATERLOO (CUP)—Former University of Waterloo Federation of Students executive member Franz Klingender was charged on November 25 with mischief in connection with a rock-throwing incident which shattered a window in the offices of the Chevron, the student newspaper cut off from Federation funding.

Waterloo Campus Security said Klingender was charged and that the preliminary hearing would be held yesterday.

On November 24, Klingender became the sixth executive member to resign from the Federation since June, according to the Free Chevron, published by the Chevron staff since the paper was closed by the Federation two months ago.

Klingender refused to comment on his resignation, suggesting "you get in contact with Shane Roberts, the Federation president for more information." Roberts also refused comment.

The Chevron window was shattered late on November 21, following a council meeting which directed Roberts to take the steps necessary for the Federation to make full use of the Chevron office, occupied by staff since the closing.

An attempt to change the locks November 29 was thwarted when staff and supporters covered door knobs with their hands. Over 100 students had gathered in the office three days earlier in violation of a "no trespassing" sign posted by the Federation.

The Federation closed the Chevron September 30 following the resignation of the editor-in-chief who cited political pressure from other staff as his reason. Councillors charged that a campus political group, the Anti-Imperialist Alliance, was trying to take over the paper.

Chevron staff deny this, saying the Federation has not provided any proof for its charges.

and 10,600 to college.

A little less than half of visa students came from third world countries while just over a quarter came from Hong Kong and about a third came from developed countries.

Forty percent of the visa students attending university and 53 percent of those in colleges attended Ontario institutions. Quebec had the next highest concentration of visa students with 28 percent and 15 percent attending university and college respectively. Alberta also had a high number of visa students in its colleges with about 17 percent of the total.

Other provinces' visa student population ranged from four to eight percent, with Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island accounting for less than one percent each.

Universities with the highest proportion of visa students include McGill, Toronto, Concordia, Calgary, and Windsor. Three Ontario community colleges share the highest number of international students—Seneca, George Brown and Algonquin—about 300-400 each.

According to the study, international undergraduate students predominated in arts and science (1,376), social sciences (1,777), and engineering and applied sciences (1,418). They made up 20 percent of all engineering students in Canada, and about 14 percent of math and physical science students.

The 75 international students registered in Canada's 16 medical faculties accounted for less than 1 percent of medical students. The report noted that while visa student enrollment is climbing it has dropped drastically in that faculty from 365 in 1965 and 292 in 1970.

The study used 1971 statistics to measure numbers of Canadian students abroad because the figures are not readily available. At that time there were almost 13,000 abroad, 80 percent of which were attending American universities. About 17 percent studied in France.

The report notes that before the late '60s the number of Canadian students abroad outnumbered international students here.

Prize for Literature from the Organizing Committee, but took the money anyway", commented Denis Johnston last night at a talk given in the Arts Building.

Johnson, an eminent man of letters, elaborated on his theory of Beckett's writing development. "Beckett seemed to intentionally confuse readers by using high-faluting words and mystifying phrases," said Johnston. One of the examples given was "Whorescope," which is an imitation of T.S. Eliot's Wasteland.

In more recent works, the play "Breath" seems to confound many people in that the whole 14 minutes consists of the curtains opening, a long sigh being sighed, and eventually the curtains closing. "For me, this isn't a play, it's a waste of time; but of course, it's a very individual thing".

An interesting thing that Johnston noted was that Beckett kept many of his earlier works out of reach of the public, either by having them hand-printed and distributed at fabulous costs for a limited supply or by simply writing in French.

"He didn't seem to want people to read them because he was afraid they would criticize his pompous style", Johnston remarked. In another work, an unfinished novel which was the beginning of an autobiography, "his style is amazingly straightforward, not so full of the oblique language one finds in his works today.

Samuel Beckett brings up unpleasant subjects often enough so that he can't be accused of avoiding difficult questions. For example, in one play he's written, "Happy Days", a woman is buried up to her waist in sand, cheerfully chattering away about her life. In the next scene she is now up to her neck in the sand, and so on. According to Johnston, the woman depicted was a friend of his who died of cancer.

On a personal note, Johnston testified that a woman who had gone out with him years ago found Beckett "a boring conversationalist".

Asked if he felt that Beckett was a fraud, Johnston replied: "He's a cad, but also he's a genius. A fraud? I think we're all half fraud."

Poet Robert Creeley to give reading

ATROPOS, McGill University's new literary magazine, is presenting the first of its readings by prominent American poets. Robert Creeley, one of the original group of the Black Mountain Poets, will read at McGill University's Leacock Building, room 132, on Tuesday, December 7 at 8:00 pm. There will be a nominal admission charge of $1.00 to cover Mr. Creeley's expenses and to promote a fund so that the magazine can continue its venture and arrange for further readings.

Few American poets have as authoritative or irrevocable a voice as Robert Creeley. The language of his poetry is at once subtle and humorous, yet at the same time concise and serious in its simplicity. The emphasis in his poetry is on colloquialism in speech made abstract, yet with a sense of immediacy through his ear for nuances and possibilities of common speech. His lyrics demonstrate a concision in which words are capable of releasing intimations of a more affecting reality than what is immediately apparent. Creeley makes the reader of his poems aware through language of the possibilities inherent in it.

Robert Creeley has been at the forefront of the "new" poetry since his first association with Charles Olson, Robert Duncan and the Black Mountain Group that was to become such a major influence on the new generation of poets after the Second World War. He has also been associated with the San Francisco group of poets whose leading exponents are Ginsberg, Ferlinghetti and Ed Dorn. He has authored several volumes of poetry, the best known among which are For Love, Words and Pieces. His most recent works are Thirty Things and Prescences as well as The Selected Poems which appeared through Scribner's publishing house this year. Mr. Creeley will be reading from both his old and new material.

Advanced tickets are available at the McGill Student Union ticket office as well as at the Dept. of English at Sir George Williams campus. A limited quantity will also be available at the door the night of the reading. The editors of ATROPOS, James Campbell and Zsolt Alapi will be happy to handle any special enquiries. Phone care of the McGill Dept. of English.

Growing pains

The MCM, whose annual congress begins this Friday, is experiencing an intense internal debate between left-wing "radicals" and moderate reformists. The leftist group, identified with St. Louis councillor John Gardiner, has forwarded the following proposals: 1) that a long-term campaign to set up a network of "block committees" that would act as "soviets" in preparation for socialist revolution be established and 2) that party rules governing who is eligible to run for the party in the 1978 city elections be tightened up. The left-wing position is based on the axiom that corporations and big property owners are the actual powers in society and must be identified as the enemy.

Gardiner has stated that "An MCM majority in council would be an important step but we'd still be in opposition to the real powers in society. We still wouldn't have the power to make fundamental changes and we should make that clear."

The reformist wing, headed by Paul Cliche, MCM councillor for St. Jacques, has complained that radicals have involved the party in "abstract theoretical debates". He believes that ordinary citizens are being intimidated by left-wingers.

Ligue des droits threatened with deficit

The federal government has threatened to hold back a regular subsidy from la Ligue des droits de l'homme (LDH) in an attempt to force the organization to reduce its activities. LDH President Fabien Leboeuf believes that this move endangers the survival of the league, saying "Our liberty is not negotiable and the LDH is not vendable to any government."

LDH applied for a subsidy in January of this year and fully expected to receive it in view of the fact that the federal Secretary of State has since launched a program promoting "droits de l'homme" in Canada.

The Secretary of State, however, has asked the LDH to drop its support for two Chilean families threatened with deportation. One of the two families — the Ponces — was featured in the Daily on November 19th. The LDH will be faced with a deficit of $50,000 if the subsidy is not granted.

Centraide $300,000 short

Centraide's flags and banners have been torn down across campus — a sign that the Montreal fund raising campaign has reached an official close. Campaign chairman Alex Hamilton (also Executive President of Domtar Ltd.) announced Friday that, though Centraide has raised more money this year than ever before, it is still $300,000 short of its $10 million objective. A special 'task force' has been established to raise the remaining $300,000 before the end of January.

Centraide is a centralized fund raising organization which subsidizes certain community service agencies. The major portion of the money available to Centraide is 'donated' by corporations, financial institutions and other business interests.

What's another $500,000?

Although the MUC spent $500,000 for a detailed study on integrating Montreal Island drinking water systems, the city got nothing for its money. MUC chairperson Lawrence Hanigan has said that the Lavalin Inc. consultants group has worked on the study for three years without any result.

Lavalin is incidentally the same group that was hired to ensure that rising Olympic costs would be stabilized. The Olympic bill rose from $310 million to $1.2 billion while Lavalin was at the helm.

Morgentaler

An appeal to dismiss all charges against Dr. Henry Morgentaler was made Friday to the Levesque government by the Canadian Civil Liberties Association. Morgentaler is to stand trial December 13 on one of eight abortion charges, despite the fact that the 53-year-old Montreal doctor has been thrice acquitted by different juries. "... a policy of continued prosecution would be publicly perceived as an unwillingness to accept the judgements of those juries" stated the appeal, signed by A. Alan Borovoy, general-counsel of the CCLA. "Continued prosecution of Dr. Morgentaler can only be regarded as gratuitous persecution".

Who are the criminals?

Organizers of a proposed half-way house for the rehabilitation of ex-convicts on Pine Avenue between Cedar Avenue and Cote des Neiges Road fear they will lose over $100,000 in private and government grants if the City continues to impede the project. Spokespeople for the John Howard Society have accused Montreal of discriminatory and socially regressive behavior in refusing a permit for the house. The City executive committee rejected the plan in September because the 15-room house is located in an area zoned for residential habitation only.

Executive Vice-chairman Yvon Lamarre denies the suggestion that the city has a general policy of discouraging the establishment of half-way houses.

25 common mistakes about Canada

Legal Aid in Manitoba prepared a six-page paper on mistakes people often make about Canada's Criminal Law. The following are some of the matters the paper deals with. Is each of these statements true or false? [The answers are at the bottom of the page.]

1. In Canada, criminal offences are classified as indictable (more serious crimes) and summary conviction (less serious crimes).
2. People who choose to remain silent when questioned about a crime must be guilty.
3. Criminal law is about fifty percent of all The Law.
4. If a person is a victim of a crime, he or she can drop the charges at any time.
5. All people released on bail, must deposit hundreds or even thousands of dollars at court.
6. Everyone is exactly and entirely equal before the criminal law.
7. All persons charged with a criminal offence have a trial, and most trials are jury trials.
8. All criminal cases must receive publicity in newspapers.
9. No one thinks of the victim. The accused person has all the rights.
10. A witness can refuse to give evidence in court. A witness can decide which questions he or she will answer. A witness can plead the Fifth Amendment. A witness can refuse to name people who may have committed a crime.
11. You tell how good a criminal lawyer is solely by the number of cases won or lost.
12. A lawyer is not necessary if a person knows he or she is guilty and wants to plead guilty.
13. People who feel guilty often are not allowed by their lawyers to plead guilty.
14. Judges, police and lawyers are "above the law". They can do things that other people can't do and get away with it.
15. Being arrested and questioned by the police is such an unpleasant experience that it is always best to go to court and plead guilty as soon as possible - in order to avoid more unpleasantness.
16. A person should not plead guilty if there were good reasons for breaking the law.
17. Any person charged with breaking the law is fingerprinted and photographed.
18. The law does not allow a person to be discriminated against because of a criminal record - especially if the record is made up of minor matters.
19. When the police say "You'll have to come with me", there is no choice about going.
20. Every person arrested by the police is entitled to one telephone call.
21. Statements made to the police cannot be used in court unless the statements are written down and signed.
22. Every person from whom the police wish to take a statement must be given this "police warning" or "caution": "You do not have to make a statement, but anything you say may be taken down in writing and used at your trial".
23. If people are accused by the police or charged with breaking the law, the people must be guilty. Innocent people are not charged.

24. All questioning done by the police must be done at police headquarters.

25. The police have the right to refuse to allow a person to consult his lawyer until after they have finished questioning him.

CRIMINAL LAW GENERALLY

1. Mistake: In Canada, criminal offences are classified as felonies (more serious) and misdemeanors. Those are terms used in the United States. The words used in Canada are indictable (more serious) offences, and summary conviction (less serious) offences. Some offences can be indictable or summary conviction, at the choice of the Crown.

2. Mistake: People who choose to remain silent when questioned about a crime, must be guilty of something.

The Law says that a person accused of a crime has the right to remain silent. This rule was developed not to protect the guilty, but partly to stop abusive questioning procedures which have taken place from time to time to force people to confess to things they may or may not have done.

The rule also recognizes that words can be given different meanings and that a person asking questions - with the object of proving what that person thinks must be the truth - can twist facts and completely confuse the person being questioned.

People who are questioned long enough or who are put under enough pressure, may break down and confess to most anything - including (maybe) the truth.

The right to remain silent includes, of course, people who are not charged with an offence. In most situations, a person need not talk to the police if the person doesn't care to. Obviously, the police couldn't do the work we ask them to do, and society would be the worse off if people didn't co-operate with the police.

There are times when it is best not to remain silent. For example, a person who has an alibi defence is usually better off to make it known as soon as possible.

3. Mistake: Criminal law is fifty percent of all The Law.

Fact: The law is often divided for convenience into Criminal Law and Civil (non-criminal) Law, but they are not equal in size! Civil Law involves dozens of different kinds of law like Tax Law, Prison Law, Real Property Law, Welfare Law, Transportation Law, Juvenile Law and so on.

Criminal law gets more publicity than the rest of the Law, but it is only one small part of the Law.

4. Mistake: If a person is robbed or assaulted or is a victim of any crime, he or she can drop the charges at any time.

The Law considers crimes to be against all of society and not just against the individual victims. It is usually not a victim's choice as to whether a charge should be laid to whether a trial should take place.

A victim can influence a particular case: the person may not report the crime or may not fully co-operate with the police, etc. But once a crime is under police investigation, it isn't often that the victim is given the chance to make decisions about what should be done about it.

5. Mistake: All people released on bail must deposit hundreds or even thousands of dollars at court.

The Law: It is true that some people are required to deposit money before they are released. But most people are released from jail simply by signing a promise (the legal word is "recognizance") to go back to court when their cases come up. The recognizance may include a promise to pay a certain amount of money if the person does not go to court when he or she is supposed to.

For example, you will often hear a judge in court say that a person can be released "on his own recognizance of $1,000". The $1,000 is not paid to court and never will have to be if the person returns to court and lives by any other conditions set by the judge - such as staying away from a certain place or abstaining from drinking alcohol.

Bail is not usually necessary. Accused persons can be released from custody on a simple promise to be in court when required.

6. Mistake: Everyone is exactly

Canada's Criminal Law: test yourself

and entirely equal before the criminal law.

Fact: Many comments have been made by various people that while everyone is subject to the criminal law, it tends to be lower income people who are involved with it, and that they are less likely than upper income people to know their legal rights and to be able to exercise them. For example, a high income person is more likely than a low income person to know the name of a lawyer, to insist on calling a lawyer, to remain silent or to be able to explain a situation to the police, to make a good appearance in court, to testify articulately and to be believed and to receive a moderate sentence. One person expressed it briefly: "When an upper income person is involved with the criminal law, his advantages begin to multiply. When a low income person is involved with the criminal law, his disadvantages begin to multiply".

7. Mistake: All persons charged with an offence have a trial and most trials are jury trials.

Fact: Television programs and movies create this impression, but it is not an accurate picture of what really happens. Most people charged with criminal offences plead guilty, so that no trial is necessary. (The purpose of a trial is to decide guilt or innocence. If the accused person admits guilt, there is no need for a trial.) No more than ten percent of all accused people plead "not guilty" and only a few of them elect (choose) trial by jury. In Winnipeg there are only about 30 jury trials each year.

Jury trials can be elected (chosen) only in some indictable (more serious) matters. Jury trials are not available on all offences.

8. Mistake: All criminal cases must receive publicity in newspaper.

The Law: There is very little law on the subject of publicity. However, it is clear that newspapers and other media are able to print at least the names of accused persons at any stage of a criminal matter.

There is no law that newspapers must publish any names. The numbers which actually appear in a newspaper depends on such things as the space available in the paper and the number of reporters at the courts. A survey of two Winnipeg newspapers a few years ago showed that about one out of every five criminal cases were being reported.

9. Mistake: No one thinks of the victim. The accused person has all the rights.

The Law: It is true that victims of crime often are not fully compensated for their injuries or loss; perhaps the injury just cannot be fully corrected or the criminal is not worth suing because he or she has nothing or restitution of damaged property isn't possible.

But victims do have rights. In Manitoba, there is a Crime Compensation Board to which victims of crime may apply for compensations as a result of crime.

Victims of crime may sue the persons who causes them injury or loss. All victims should obtain legal advice about this and other possible actions they might take. There is a lot of discussions going on now about how criminals might be able to help their victims or somehow correct what has been done, rather than the law simply putting the criminal in jail or making him or her pay a fine.

10. Mistake: A witness can refuse to give evidence in court. A witness can decide which questions he or she will answer. A witness can plead the Fifth Amendment. A witness can refuse to name people who may have committed a crime.

The Law: The Fifth Amendment is United States' law, not Canada's. That law allows a person to refuse to give evidence which might incriminate himself or herself.

In Canada, a witness must answer all questions asked in court. If he or she refuses to do so, the judge may find the person in "contempt of court" and order the person put in jail - perhaps until the person decides to answer the question.

If the person's evidence may incriminate him or her, the person may ask for the protection of the Canada Evidence Act. That law says that any person given the protection of the Act cannot have the evidence used against him or her in a later criminal case (except on a charge of perjury).

LAWYERS AND LEGAL ADVICE

11. Mistake: You tell how good a criminal lawyer is solely by the number of cases he or she wins and loses.

Fact: If you think along the lines of most television programs and you define a "win" only by a "not guilty" decision, then you won't find any criminal lawyers who are any good! Over ninety percent of people accused of a crime end up being convicted, either because they plead guilty or because they are found guilty after a trial.

A criminal lawyer's job is to represent clients to the best of his or her ability, given the facts of each case. More often than not, the lawyer is trying to make the best of a bad situation. And so, a conviction for manslaughter may be a "win", because the original charge was murder. Or a client sentenced to one year in prison may be thankful that it wasn't two years, and the lawyer may regard this as the best that could have been done for the client.

In judging the skill of a criminal lawyer, there is more involved than just adding up convictions and acquittals.

12. Mistake: A lawyer is not necessary if a person knows he or she is guilty and wants to plead guilty.

The Law: Everyone is entitled to consult a lawyer - and everyone should consult a lawyer to be sure of what the law is, and to find out what can happen if he or she pleads guilty or is found guilty after a trial. Lawyers can advise accused persons of whether they have a defense, and of what facts about the person should be mentioned in court.

13. Mistake: People who feel guilty often are not allowed by their lawyers to plead guilty.

Fact: A lawyer's job is to take instructions, not to give them. If a person wants to plead guilty, it is his or her privilege to do so - and to instruct the lawyer that way. If the lawyer is unable to accept the instructions or if the client is not able to accept the advice of the lawyer, either one of them may decide to end their relationship; the lawyer may refuse to act or the client may seek another lawyer.

People sometimes confuse moral guilt with legal guilt. An accused person may feel guilty about the event which resulted in a criminal charge, but the person may not be guilty in law. For example: a person may feel guilty about having been with someone who robbed another person. But the law says a person is not necessarily guilty just because he or she is present when a crime is committed.

One of a lawyer's duties to a client is to explain the law - and sometimes that includes explaining the difference between moral and legal guilt.

14. Mistake: Judges, police and lawyers are "above the law". They can do things that other people can't do and get away with it.

The Law: Everyone is subject to the law. A person cannot commit a criminal offence like assault or fraud and get away with it just because of his or her occupation.

All judges, police and lawyers are accountable to other people (like other judges, police and lawyers!) just like everyone else in our society.

15. Mistake: Being arrested and questioned by the police is such an unpleasant experience that it is always best to go to court and plead guilty as soon as possible - in order to avoid more unpleasantness.

Fact: For most people it is an embarrassing and fearful thing to be arrested by the police (especially if it is at one's own home) and it is often the desire of people who have been charged with breaking the law to "want to get it over with" as soon as possible. This feeling is understandable, but it is not wise to make final decisions in such a state of mind.

Every person is entitled in law to obtain the advice of a lawyer and it is wise to do so as soon as possible if a person is charged - or is liable to be charged. Advice should be obtained no matter how hopeless the situation may seem to be!

16. Mistake: A person should not plead guilty if there were good reasons why he or she broke the law.

The Law: Again we say that a person accused of a crime should obtain the advice of a lawyer! Lawyers often find that people confuse the question of guilt or innocence with the question of sentencing. A person may have excellent reasons for having done something, but those reasons are in most (not all) cases separate from the law's first concern: is the person guilty or innocent of what he or she is accused? If the thing was done, then the law considers the reasons.

For example: a drunk person drives his car in order to get someone to a hospital in an emergency situation. He may very well be found guilty of impaired driving (if he were charged in the first place) but his reason for doing it might result in a very moderate sentence.

The explanation for breaking a law is usually called a "mitigating circumstance".

CRIMINAL RECORDS

17. Mistake: Any person charged with breaking the law is fingerprinted and photographed.

The Law: The Identification of Criminals Act of Canada says that a person accused (not convicted) of an indictable (more serious) criminal offence under the Criminal Code can be fingerprinted and photographed. Persons charged with summary convictions (less serious) offences under the Criminal Code or under other laws cannot be fingerprinted or photographed unless they agree to it.

18. Mistake: The law does not allow a person to be discriminated against because of a criminal record - especially if the record is made up of minor matters.

The Law: There are laws forbidding discrimination based on race, sex, religion and so on. But there is no law forbidding discrimination based on a criminal record. For example: a person might not get a job or be able to rent a house because of his or her criminal record.

A criminal record can be erased by the granting of a pardon. The pardon must be applied for by the person with a record.

POLICE POWERS AND PROCEDURES

19. Mistake: When the police say "You'll have to come with me" there is no choice about going.

The Law: says, in effect that the police cannot insist on a person going with them unless the person is under arrest. The person has the right to be told that he or she is under arrest and (where the reason isn't obvious) the reason why.

20. Mistake: Every person arrested by the police is entitled to one telephone call.

The Law: Whether or not a person in police custody is allowed a telephone call is pretty well up to the police. There is no law requiring it.

In breathalyzer cases, there are court decisions which have established that a person can call a lawyer for advice before blowing into the machine. But a request to make the call must be made to the police by the person. If the call is not then allowed, the person has a lawful excuse for refusing the test. But if the call is requested and refused and the test then taken, the results can be used in court.

21. Mistake: Statements made to the police cannot be used in court unless the statements are written down and signed.

The Law: Any statement made to the police whether spoken or written down - and whether signed or not - may be used in court at a later time, if the judge is satisfied the statement was made voluntarily.

22. Mistake: Every person from whom the police wish to take a statement must be given the "police warning" or "caution": "You do not have to make a statement, but anything you say may be taken down in writing and used at your trial".

The Law: There is no law in Canada requiring that the caution be given, but courts have often said it is preferable that the warning be given to help make sure any statement given to the police is voluntary.

23. Mistake: If people are accused by the police or charged with breaking the law, the people must be guilty. Innocent people are not charged.

The Law: Police, lawyers and judges each have a particular job to do. One of the jobs of the police is to investigate possible crimes and to lay charges. Though they are entitled to their own opinions, the job of the police is not to decide whether people are guilty (that's the judge's job) or to advise people whether to plead guilty (that's the lawyer's job).

In our criminal law, a person is presumed innocent until proven guilty. The laying of a charge by the police is not, by itself, proof of guilt. The question of guilt or innocence is for the courts to decide.

24. Mistake: All questioning done by the police must be done at police headquarters.

Fact: There is no law requiring the police to do all questioning at a place of their choosing, but that's often the way it happens. It is said to be more convenient for the police to take suspects and witnesses to a police station for questioning. Of course there is a psychological advantage in having a person in one's own territory! (See also Number 19.)

.....

25. Mistake: The police have the right to refuse to allow a person to consult his lawyer until after they have finished questioning him.

Fact: A person has a legal right to the assistance and advice of counsel at the earliest possible opportunity. If the police refuse to allow the person to speak to his lawyer, that person is entitled to refuse to say anything at all until he has been afforded the opportunity of speaking with a lawyer.

AUDITOR'S STATEMENT—STUDENTS' SOCIETY '75-76

TO: ALL MCGILL STUDENTS

FROM: G. Sam Kingdon

Acting Executive Director

Within the last two weeks, the accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand completed the audit of the Students' Society financial records for the fiscal year 1975-76. The year terminated as at June 30, 1976. I am reproducing here for the information of all concerned, copies of the most important statements of the Auditor's report. These statements are:

Balance Sheet as at June 30, 1976
Statement of Surplus (Deficit)
Statement of Revenue & Expenditure
Schedule 1 — Students' Activities Statement
Schedule 2 — Students' Union (Building Accounts)
Schedule 3 — Union Cafeteria
Schedule 4 — Students' Society Office & General Accounts
Auditor's Notes

The remaining statements in the balance of the Auditor's report are detailed breakdowns of some of the summary figures included in the above. For any students who are interested in these breakdowns, copies may be obtained at the offices of the Students' Society.

In addition to the Auditor's Notes, I feel it is important to add the following observations:

a) In the balance sheet and in the statement of surplus (deficit), a surplus of $139,060 is shown. This does not mean that the Students' Society completed the year with a profit of that amount. Rather, it is an accumulation of profits, losses and investments since the beginning of the Society. In other words, if we were to liquidate the Students' Society, we should realize an amount of $139,060. This would consist of the $100,255 in the Investment Reserve Fund and, in the Auditor's estimate, $38,805 worth of salable equipment.

b) In point of fact, the Students' Society operated at a considerable deficit in 1975-76. This deficit amounted to $76,280 and is indicated in the reduction of the Investment Reserve Fund by this amount. (See the Balance Sheet) The deficit was made up of the operating deficiency (shown on the Statement of Revenue & Expenditure) of $61,304; the payment of $13,768 on the McGill Students' Housing Corporation Loan (see Auditor's Note No. 2) and the balance of $1,208 in accounting adjustments.

These statements represent the use made of your Students' Society fees and the erosion of investment funds pertaining to the Students' Society during last year. I would welcome any observations or queries you may have in this regard.
